

Media Release

6 December 2011

The success of HES during the past decade rates high on the list of great Australian business success stories.

Commencing operations in 2001, HES began as a specialist in extreme environment entry, intervention, inspection, maintenance and repair. Customer satisfaction resulted in its clients demanding more, broader and integrated services from HES. As a result, its suite of services expanded to include the provision of career qualified medical professionals, emergency service officers, security personnel, confined space entry teams, safety advisors, fleet and equipment services.

Being a multiple award winner and lost time injury free since inception, HES is renowned for its capability, capacity, and commitment to deliver specialist services to remote industry groups throughout the region.

Unprecedented growth has seen HES relocate its Head Office to a new and larger facility at 15 Catalano Road, Canning Vale, WA. As well as this, its busy Eastern Region Base has been established at 13/43 Links Avenue North, Eagle Farm, Queensland.

Jonathon Silbert, HES Operations Director said, "HES is in the enviable position to boast a truly comprehensive single source solution to large operational sites and construction projects. We have a significant footprint in the marketplace delivering specialist services to many of the nation's largest companies each and every day."

To support its client and internal training needs, HES is a Nationally Registered Training Organisation (RTO). It delivers a range of practical safety, medical, emergency response and fire courses at its Canning Vale office, at clients workplaces, as well as at its purpose built Fire & Emergency Response Training Base located at IFAP, 128 Farrington Road, North Lake, WA.

With a growing and dedicated team of approximately 150 highly trained staff across the region, the success of HES is established and it will continue to provide the construction, resources and offshore industries with added peace of mind and confidence.
